THE OLD TRUCKER

IN THE Australian outback, the old trucker clutches the steering wheel, settling his back into the worn vinyl seat. He pushes the pedal to the metal, waiting for the engine to respond. He's heading home for the last time.

The truck seems to know the way.

The old trucker's eyes glisten. "This is definitely my last trip."

Both truck and driver are worn out. He slowly turns his head sideways to look out the passenger window. He sees a blue flash. It pierces the ink colored sky. Experience tells him he must stop, but he presses on.

Rain on the cabin roof sounds like small pebbles.

Another blue flash rips a line in the heavens.

Through fatigue filled eyes the old trucker sees the flat desert landscape, barren, unchanging, yet it's full of life. The spectacle captures his concentration. He curls dry callous fingers tighter around the wheel, trying to shake his concentration awake.

A third sun-bright flash illuminates the cabin.

He catches a glimpse of a well-worn photo stuck to the dashboard. The black and white print, now dirty and faded is of his wife on their wedding day. As he closes his eyes for a second, he smiles.

In his dream, he sees her face.

He rubs a weathered hand over his eyes to force them open. His four-day-old grey whiskers are rough. He knows his wife doesn't mind; he knows she's just happy to have him home safe one more time. He smiles at the reason she always leaves the upstairs bathroom light on.

'Never can sleep when you're not home,' he recalls her favorite saying.

The truck turns the last corner. Through narrowing slits, the old man sees the welcome light. He pretends to feel its warmth.

The truck's engine coughs and falls silent.

He pats the door and climbs down from the driver's seat.

The old trucker looks at his truck. "Thanks for getting me home safe old girl. You've been a great friend throughout the years. We're both retired now. We've paid our dues."

The old trucker turned and hobbled into his home to the waiting arms of his loving wife.

Synopsis: Legendary Blue Diamond. Adventure romance. Available April 10th 2012

HISTORIANS AND researchers say the birth of the legendary blue diamond originated when the earth was being born. Some say the legend commenced at the union between a man who had skin, the colour of the night sky and a woman who had skin the colour of the sun. Rumour has it that the diamond was no larger than a single carrot. Lately there have been whispers that the deep blue coloured diamond was reported to be in excess of nine carrots possibly even ten or higher. What I believe isn't important, though I assume it lays somewhere in between. There's been bush talk from the Australian Kimberley's to Melbourne; whosoever touches the blue stone will die, for it is cursed by God. I believe it is due to man's greed and the blood that drips from his hands is the truth behind the cursed stone.

I have extensively researched a great number of books on the subject looking for a start date to the authenticity of the legend. I think I may have uncovered the actual events, but I have no way of proving if the facts are correct. I have been able to ascertain the legend was born around the mid 1800's AD when the State bank of Victoria was in its infancy. A gold prospector unearthed the diamond. In days he had sold it. The buyer was a man in charge of the bank. The diamond was indeed dark blue in colour, but definitely a one off, stroke of luck find. One cold dark night a bushranger, his brother and a third man came into a small town searching for the blue diamond. They never found it. The banker was tortured for the information of the stone's whereabouts. He took the knowledge of its existence to his grave. Of late a possible theory has been circulating that the man's wife has it in her possession. How she escaped from being murdered was any one's guess.

If you ask me, do I believe in the story, I'll answer you truthfully. I know it only to be a legend.

Being transported again through time is not an option.

The clock is ticking.

Haleton will do anything to stay by Amber's side, but is it possible for her to love him? Can Craig Benyon, Amber's close friend, be trusted? After all he loves her as much as William Haleton.
